Exploration park mill creek wa

Catch the kids and head to mill creek's new exploratory park playground and you'll find plenty of room to run, play, climb and hide. Little adventure crews you can taste nature here - climbing boulders and tree trunks, exploring flowing litter and scaling mountains - are all right in town. Find this 1.2-acre circular park in the North Point neighborhood of Mill Creek, just off 35th Street. S.E. Credit: JiaYing GrygielHalf of the brand new grassy lawn park that provides enough room to run. The other half of nature meets parkour of course. Kids can take a small mountain peak, duck through a tunnel below, cross wooden bridges and dig in dan full of grit. Playground equipment includes a hilly double slide, a balance beam and a Kumpan rope climber and swing set. A dry flow bed filled with rocks leads to a frog pond. New wheelchair-friendly picnic tables and concrete sidewalks around the park meet ADA access standards. It's a great track for cyclists to start, too. We saw a little boy practicing his balance bike skills, his father passing him in the carriage with a baby saib, you can go on, man! You can go wherever you want. Credit: JiaYing GrygielBuilding This new park costs mind-boggling $1.25 million, with half the money going to grading, drainage and irrigation work. (Don't screw up anymore!) The park was closed from April to October 2019, and its North Point neighbours must listen to construction vehicles for six months. but what payment . It was designed specifically as a neighborhood park, primarily for 225 homes in the North Point development. It is intended for families living within walking distance or cycling, not as a destination park (but you still have to go). There are only 22 parking spaces built around the park, so plan accordingly. Credit: JiaYing GrygielThere has no restroom here with the design and add one would reportedly have cost another $1 million (really?). We planned ahead for details, though - Albertsons and McDonald's at 132 S.E. Street, just half a mile or so away there. Because of the hilly play area, parents don't have large sight lines. But on a weekning morning, the park was quiet enough that a few mothers could go to it while sitting at picnic tables and still hear their kids playing. With all its corners and cranies, the park is the perfect exploration for an epic hidden and looking game. Credit: JiaYing GrygielThe swing set includes two regular belt swings and a basket swing. We saw a kid who had the belly time of his life in that basket swing later, we saw a determined toddler struggling the faux-rock steps up the top of the mountain. This park is really for all ages - a super fun obstacle course for older kids, but available for waddlers and tots, too. The beautiful landscaping around the play area includes a frog pond/rain garden designed to collect and filter storm-water water. You Have to keep an eye on the kids around the small pond if they are kind of prone to toppling in. Stone-sized ostrich eggs in the constant flow bed were irresistible to the gaggle of preschool we saw. We've seen them weigh rocks in the pond, so it seems like it's only a matter of time before that pond is filled: JiaYing GrygielI asked my 4-year-old what he likes best about the exploration park, and he said it was a slide. At first he was scared and wanted to hold my hand but then realized that the slide was incredibly slow. He could slowly walk up and down the slide in his sneakers, it was an exciting discovery. A ton of entertainment is packed in this half-moon-shaped playground this is well worth putting in your orbit, even if you don't live in the North Point neighborhood (shhh...). Just plan a potty stop before and after the game. Glossy slides capture reflection. Credit: JiaYing Grygiel Find it: Exploration Park is located at 13901 North Point Circle in Mill Creek. (Mill Creek is a town of about 20.0 residents located about 20 miles north of both Seattle and Bellevue, and 10 miles south of Everett.) Opening hours: Mill Creek City parks are open daily, dawn to dusk. Amenities: The park doesn't have a restroom; there's a plan ahead with a pit stop at a shop or restaurant along near 132 S.E. Street, a Starbucks and a McDonald's about a mile from this main drag. Parking spaces: There are 22 parking spaces; It's likely to be good for a week's day. On a sunny weekend, plan to park on neighborhood street and walk a little. By Richard Van Winkle, News of Mill Creek. Construction contractor McCluver & Sons completed the exploration park project on October 4, 2019, so mill creek's newest neighborhood park is now open to the public. The following features were specifically approved for young families to enjoy designed by parks and recreation boards, city staff, design review board members, and city council in 2016 and 2017: large well-drained game lawns, bike racks, benches, and picnic tables, game furniture including rock climbing produced and rock climbing game furniture. Extensive natural playground element. The exploration park playground element includes a parkour structure, balance stairs, rock steps leading to slides, game logs, and a Dan Beaver, he said, adding that the cost of this part of the project was offset by a $100,000 allowance from Snohomish County to develop a playground structure, according to Mill Creek Communications and Marketing Coordinator Meredith Cook. The park has minimal parking and no lounge room, so it will be most useful for local families within walking distance. Fixing drainage issues in the park proved to be the costliest aspect of construction, with at least a third of the construction budget of $1,253,939. At an October 22 city council meeting overseeing engineer Matthew Feeley reported that the new drainage system is working well, even over the past weeks Emotional told the city council that the project was completed on time and $110,000 under the budget, even after a number of change orders. The park's ribbon cutting and dedication ceremony for Discovery Park, located in North Point Circle in 2012, will be held on Tuesday, October 29, at 6pm. City council staff will be present as well as city employees. The public is welcomed. Explore the natural playground element park including Dan Beaver. Photo Courtesy of Mill Creek City.
